

MASTERCLASS: RETHINKING THE RULES OF WRITING

In this workshop, aimed at those who love OR dread (and everything in between) writing, we will challenge the conventional rules of academic/formal writing and give participants the opportunity to explore different written forms, styles and voices. These creative writing activities and experimentations will demonstrate how one can improve their relationship with writing and use it as a tool for critical and creative thinking, discovery, and as an artistic medium in itself. We will also consider how creative forms and techniques of writing can feed back into more formal or academic written work, which is a vital skill within higher education and/or professional life. This workshop will instil participants with the confidence that they can write, and that the act of writing can offer unexpected outcomes through a truly enjoyable process.

If you would like to book this workshop please do fill out our booking form and a member of our team will be in touch!
