

MASTERCLASS: THINKING CRITICALLY

Critical thinking is the ability to ask 'why' as well as 'how', to analyse and evaluate in order to form judgement, resisting first impressions and looking carefully at the available information, considering multiple interpretations and using this creatively. This process of observation and study helps teach students to closely observe and analyse the world around them – skills that make up the bedrock of critical thinking. This workshop can be adapted to suit Key Stage outcomes and needs of different student groups, taking them on a journey through critical thinking and action-based research that will give a very different perspective on modern society.

If you would like to book this workshop please do fill out our booking form and a member of our team will be in touch!
